Internet job store

(Special) - The British Columbia Chamber of Commerce has announced the launch of its new Internet Job Store, which will be a free service for both job seekers and employers.

The BC Chamber Job Store has been developed in partnership with WCG International Consultants and was unveiled at a Victoria media conference last week by Premier Gordon Campbell.

"We have set a goal of being the first port of call for people looking for work throughout B.C.," said John Winter, President and CEO of the B.C. Chamber of Commerce. "By partnering with local chambers the Job Store will allow us to provide primary human resources help for businesses and individuals looking to match skills with opportunities."

The New Job Store is available on the B.C. Chamber website at www.bcchamberjobstore.org and will be linked to every chamber in the province by the spring. Every chamber will be able to register seekers and employers and list them in their respective communities as well as linking to the wider provincial job market.

In addition the B.C. Chamber Job Stores already features an active call centre which currently has over 2,000 jobs posted on the site.

The British Columbia Chamber of Commerce represents over 28,000 businesses and more than 130 Chambers throughout the province.
